Procedure

Lumbar Fusion

Posterior Lumbar Fusion (PLF) is a surgical procedure to help alleviate back or extremity pain by freeing-up sensitive nerves and stabilizing vertebral segments. Typically, the spine surgeon will clear pathways for nerves from arthritic disc material and overgrown bone. The affected area is stabilized with an interbody implant between the vertebral segments to facilitate a bone fusion.

OUR PATIENT OUTCOMES

Before surgery takes place, we ask our patients to complete surveys which include Pain, Quality of Life and Activity Assessments. Patients are then asked to complete the same surveys at follow up visits after surgery. Survey scores before surgery are then compared to survey scores after surgery to know how the patient is recovering. An overall satisfaction score is also assessed after surgery. We do this because our best measure of success is how the patient feels and functions after surgery.

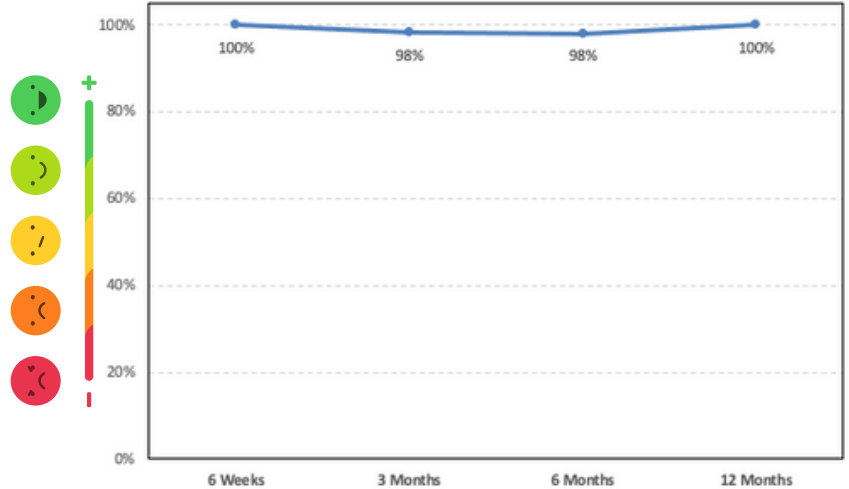

Here are the results of our patient surveys after undergoing back procedure.
